

EAST END

A blend of bikes, brews

Tim Williams

CAFE and cycling cultures will combine in a new East End event called Bikes and Baristas.

Ebenezer Place will transform into a cycling hub for the November 17 event, with displays of historic bikes, exercise bike competitions and a "bike spa" — like a car wash for bicycles.

There will also be displays of art made from bike parts, bike-based mobile food sellers, repair demonstrations and a mini cycling track for children.

Organiser Amanda Zimmerman said all things caffeinated would happen in Vardon Ave, including competitions for baristas to make the best brews and the most impressive "latte art".

"We're inviting all our local baristas to come into the competition for free," she said.

The East End has more than 50 cafes and restaurants selling coffee, as well as three bike shops.

Treadly Bike Shop owner Sam Neeft said East End cafes were well known for attracting cycling groups on weekends. "Cafe culture and people riding bikes is very much part of the East End and there's the social side of things behind both coffee and cycling," he said.
